ISRAELI SOLDIER KILLED

Two Migs downed after Syrian border flareup

Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent
An Israeli soldier, Rav-Tural Karl Hirsch, 24, of Tel Aviv was killed in yesterday's flareup along the Syrian border. Israel Air Force planes shot down two Syrian Mig 21 jets in a pre-sunset dogfight that followed an early afternoon air strike at two Syrian frontline posts and a subsequent shelling of the Israeli line along a 40-kms. stretch of the Golan Heights.
The Israel Army spokesman said all Israeli planes returned safely from their missions. He said two civilians were wounded in the shelling which ended at 6 p.m. Damage was caused to buildings, vehicles and electricity poles on the Israeli side. Rav-Tural Hirsch sustained fatal wounds.
(The Syrians claimed they shot down four Israeli planes, two by anti-aircraft fire. The Israel spokesman flatly denied the claim.)
The two Syrian Migs were shot down in Syrian territory some 15 kms. from Israeli positions.
In the late afternoon strike, the Israeli jets, in addition to downing the Migs, pounded artillery and anti-aircraft positions, including one Sam-2 site. Intermittent but not heavy artillery fire continued from the Syrian side until after dusk.
The Syrian border was quiet since October 30 when, following a spate of terrorist incidents, the Air Force bombed four terrorist bases near Damascus and an Army base in north Syria.
The last aerial battle with the Syrians was on September 9 when three Suchois were shot down. Yesterday's bag brings to 33 the number of Syrian planes shot down since the Six Day War.
Most of the shelling from Syria was aimed at the civilian settlements of Ein Zivan in the north and Ramat Maghshim in the south. The two wounded civilians are from Ramat Maghshim.
The event sparking yesterday's flareup began at dawn yesterday when Israeli forces discovered a large group of saboteurs, estimated at about 18, who had installed a series of 81mm mortar shells and bazookas close to where the borders of Israel, Syria and Jordan meet.

Map shows points where Air Force struck at Syrian positions with two Migs downed, at right hand corner, Ein Zivan and Ramat Maghshim are the two settlements at which most of the shelling was directed.

SYRIAN VERSION

The Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter adds:
The Syrian army spokesman last night admitted losing two fighter planes but claimed that four Israeli planes were downed over the Golan Heights. The spokesman said that the Syrian pilots had parachuted to safety.
The spokesman said the fighting along the cease-fire line, involving artillery, was still continuing after 6 p.m.
Damascus Radio reported the fighting in its 2.15 p.m. news broadcast, then interrupted its programmes at 3.40 p.m. and 4.50 p.m. to broadcast military communiques.
The Syrians first reported that two formations of Israeli jet fighters bombed two of their front-line military bases, killing one soldier and wounding two others. At 3.40 they said that their artillery and air force went into action against Israeli positions at the Golan Heights "with heavy fire scoring direct hits on enemy targets." At 4.50, they issued a terse military statement saying that their air force was intercepting Israeli planes which had resumed their bombing of Syrian front-line army positions.

EARLY PEACE U.S. SAYS; HANOI: NO

US (UPI). — The U.S. said today it believed the Vietnam negotiations were entering a final stage, but North Vietnam said there would be no early peace.
The Vietnamese Communists said Washington is delaying the signing of a peace treaty so it can strengthen South Vietnam and a giant airlift was pouring tons of weapons daily into the country.
Phu Minh Vy, Hanoi's negotiator, said after yesterday's 18th session: "Peace is not for tomorrow."
The reason is simple — the U.S. has not signed the peace agreement as it should have done."
A delegation spokesman David Peterson told newsmen: "We are confident that an additional private meeting will take place fairly soon."
The White House said Henry Kissinger and Hanoi negotiators are in that meeting an agreement is being reached.
Kissinger had a long meeting with President Nixon yesterday. He was expected to fly to Paris today to resume peace negotiations. Peterson said the mood of the delegations was "broadly optimistic."
William J. Porter, chief American negotiator, said broadly as he told newsmen: "We reaffirm our good faith as we reach what we believe can be the final stage of our negotiations."

NIXON SETS TOP PRIORITY FOR M.E. POLICY

By SAM LIPSKI, Jerusalem Post Correspondent
WASHINGTON. — President Nixon has said that the Middle East "could have a very high priority" in his new administration because "it could explode at any time."
Mr. Nixon's views were published yesterday in an interview with the Washington "Star-News."
"The Middle East will have a very high priority because while the Mideast has been over the past couple of years, in a period of uneasy truce or armistice, or whatever you want to call it, it can explode at any time," Mr. Nixon stated.
While President Nixon's remarks yesterday underline similar views recently expressed by senior American officials — Secretary of State Rogers last Sunday for example — there has been no indication from any administration quarter of any essentially different diplomatic or political proposals for a Middle East settlement.
Both Israeli and American officials here take the view that any intensified American activity will be directed towards an interim Suez Canal agreement, such activity beginning to accelerate early in 1973.
In an interpretation of the interview, the paper's diplomatic correspondent said that Mr. Nixon's election victory "sets the stage for new moves in the balance of power diplomacy he is relying on to mould a generation of peace everywhere, except in the Middle East."
He said that while there is relaxation of tension in Europe "the area where all bets for balance between the superpowers break down is the Middle East."
Mr. Nixon said of his foreign policy plans in his second term: "The first year will be a very busy one. We are going to move on Salt II (the U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, second round)."
"We, of course, will be moving on the European security conference, and in a parallel channel we will be moving on the mutual balanced force reduction."
"We will continue the dialogue with the People's Republic of China, although that is a long-range process. Nothing sudden is going to happen."
"There will be no change, no change whatever, in our policy toward Cuba, unless and until — and I do not anticipate this will happen — Castro changes his policy toward Latin America and the United States."
The President acknowledged publicly that there are difficulties in the relationship between his prominent foreign adviser, Henry Kissinger, and the State Department headed by Secretary of State William Rogers.

Talks before Jan. 1

NEW YORK (INA). — Nixon Administration officials "are planning to relaunch the Middle East talks before January 1 under ground rules that would require major concessions from Israel," Michael Berlin reported in yesterday's "New York Post," quoting U.S. officials.
"The U.S. will be trying to wring from Israel" concessions including "stationing of Egyptian troops in part of the territory from which Israeli forces would withdraw and placement of some sort of international peacekeeping force between Egyptian and Israeli lines." The U.S. will also "require Egypt to forgo any insistence that eventually as part of the agreement, Israeli troops withdraw completely from the Sinai peninsula," Berlin said.
Post reporter Herbert Ben-Adi adds that Beersheba bases are generally reliable and claim — "but when I'm in a hurry I take a taxi." The last fare rise approved for Beersheba was two years ago. (Power on wheels, Magazine, page 3)

U.N. divided on how to deal with terrorism

UNITED NATIONS (AP). — The U.N. Assembly came to grips yesterday with international terrorism, but was divided over how strongly to condemn it and what action to take. The U.S. and other Western powers are pressing for strong measures.
All countries are prepared in principle to condemn international terrorism but defining what they are condemning is proving to be the most difficult question. Belgium's Dr. Erik Suy told the General Assembly legal committee.
As chairman, Dr. Suy had spent weeks seeking a compromise with Arab and African countries who want to avoid criticizing the use of violence to gain independence.
"Several delegations find some difficulty in formulating a definition without taking into account self-determination and the legitimacy of national struggles against colonialism and foreign domination."
Reporting to the committee on consultations he has held since the item was included in the committee agenda six weeks ago, Dr. Suy urged members to focus their discussions on the problem of definition and how to carry the issue a stage further through a study by some other U.N. organ.
He listed six questions which had emerged from his consultations:
• Should the Assembly censure acts of international terrorism and to what extent?
• Should activities undertaken in the context of the right of peoples to self-determination be regarded as international terrorism?
• What future action should be taken by the U.N. with regard to international terrorism?
• Is it acceptable to include this item in the provisional agenda of the Assembly session opening next September?
• Would it be possible for member states to proceed immediately to take measures at the national level?
• To what extent are the existing conventions capable of covering certain aspects of international terrorism?

Labour dispute on 'future map'

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Labour Party Secretary yesterday witnessed a confrontation between the two concepts prevailing in the Cabinet on the future map of Israel and on relations with the Arabs in the territories. Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir was ranged against Transport Minister Shimon Peres with Deputy Premier Yigal Alon somewhere in between.
This was the third session of the Secretary's "great debate" on Government policies in the territories. Defence Minister Moshe Dayan — who did not speak — was the target of much of Mr. Alon's speech, while Mr. Sapir spelled out his fears for the future.
The Finance Minister said he believed more strongly today than ever before in his warning of June 13, 1967 that retention of the territories and their inhabitants would lead to the strangulation of Israel.
"He backed up Knesset Finance Committee Chairman Israel Kargman, in his argument with the Defence Minister that Israel was spending a much needed ILL35m. a year on the territories. Mr. Sapir spoke of the dangers of "the flood-arms can compensate for national aspirations... The more educated a minority, the greater the number of terrorists, as world experience shows."
Answering Mr. Dayan's charges (at a previous session) that there was almost no Government encouragement of Arab entrepreneurs, Mr. Sapir noted that Israel had helped set up 150 plants employing 13,000 persons. The Government was also generous in granting loans and bank guarantees, he said.
Mr. Sapir quoted at length from data provided by the Central Bureau of Statistics whereby by 1993 — the State's 50th jubilee — the population would number almost nine million people, nearly half Arabs. "Is this the Jewish State we dreamed of and spilled blood for? Let us be realistic and consider with anxiety such bi- or multi-national states as Cyprus, Ireland, Yugoslavia, Canada and even Belgium." He stressed that he excluded East Jerusalem and Gaza from his strictures.
Mr. Sapir said he stood fully behind Premier Golda Meir in her efforts to secure peace, but he opposed any step likely to close options. He firmly opposed the plan to build

Ties with Saigon being studied

The establishment of diplomatic ties with South Vietnam is being studied in Jerusalem, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said yesterday.
The possibility of such a move first reported in The Post two weeks ago.
The question has not yet been decided with Saigon, Jerusalem sources said.

Beirut letter-bombs 'not from Belgrade'

BELOGRADE (UPI). — Parcel-bombs bearing Belgrade postmarks which injured more than seven persons in Arab capitals last month were not sent from the Yugoslav capital, the national Yugoslav news agency, Tanjug, said yesterday.
"An official Lebanese inquiry has found that the bombs were not sent from Belgrade, as had ostensibly been the case... It was established that an old postmark was used that has not been in use in the Yugoslav post offices for more than a year."
The agency said persons who sent the bombs somehow acquired an old postmark stamp from Yugoslavia.
"Evidently, there must have been an accomplice in the Beirut post office who made it possible for the parcels to pass through the mails," Tanjug said.

Jews, Communists battle in Paris

PARIS (INA). — F.G.'s broke out between Communist militants and members of the Defence Committee for Soviet Jews during a demonstration on Wednesday in front of a Soviet exhibition hall commemorating the 50th anniversary of the "October Revolution."
Police arrested four of the 20 Jewish demonstrators after protests by the Soviet embassy. The four were later released.

Ben-Horin back to Bonn

Jerusalem Post Correspondent
BONN. — The two-week-old crisis in German-Israeli relations caused by the release of the three Arab killers after the Lufthansa hijack will reach a decisive stage following the return to Bonn yesterday of Ambassador Eliezer Ben-Horin.
Mr. Ben-Horin left by El Al from Lod Airport yesterday morning, six days after returning to Israel. He had been recalled here last Friday to report to the Cabinet on the Lufthansa hijack and the release of the three Munich murderers.
In a television interview here yesterday he said that the personal message Chancellor Willy Brandt had given him for Mrs. Golda Meir had "certainly" contributed to clarifying the Bonn government's position on the matter.
He added it was now important for Israel to see what decisions the West German government would take on a local and political level to combat Arab terrorism in West Germany.
A report from Jerusalem, in the conservative daily, "Die Welt," refers to "bitter but often partly exaggerated reporting by the Israeli media about motives for the release of the terrorists."
Israeli newspapers had "not thought fit" to publish photographs of a meeting between the German author and recent Nobel prizewinner Heinrich Boell, while his discussion with Mrs. Meir had not even been referred to "by those media worth mentioning," in contrast to the treatment such a visit would have had on German television, "Die Welt" said.
"The newspaper concluded that seven years of careful attempts at rapprochement 'appear to have changed (but) little the fragility of (Israeli-German) relations.'"

Hospital staffs threaten partial strike next week

By MACABEE DEAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Non-medical Government hospital employees said yesterday they will go through with a "prolonged" partial strike set to start Tuesday, if the Padeh Committee studying their status accepts the recommendations just completed by a study subcommittee.

The Committee, set up a year ago to study the possibility of equalizing pay and conditions between the Government hospitals' non-medical staff and their Kupat Holim counterparts, will meet Sunday to discuss its subcommittee's recommendations.

The staff committee of the 6,000 Government hospital administration and service employees yesterday rejected those recommendations, which a spokesman said perpetuated the inequality and "totally ignored the fact that certain (Kupat Holim) workers were getting additional pay within the framework of a given grade."

Adding that the present situation did not always favour the Kupat Holim employees, the Government hospital personnel said they were going to arrange a meeting with their Kupat Holim colleagues, possibly for Monday, to plan possible joint protest action at a later date.

Asked if the Government workers were not afraid that a temporary back-to-work injunction might be issued against them at the request of some third party — as was the case with the Kupat Holim doctors last week — the spokesman replied that they were already considering this eventually.

Explaining the employees' opposition to the subcommittee's findings, the spokesman said that a Kupat Holim employee doing the same work and in the same grade as a Government hospital employee could nevertheless receive more pay — since he received wages above his ordinary grade. Moreover, the spokesman said, when it came to hours of work, the subcommittee had offset the longer hours of one type of worker in one institution against the longer hours of another type of worker in the other institution.

Doctors charge labour man inciting workers to violence

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The chairman of the Kupat Holim Doctors Organization, Dr. Rami Yishai, yesterday charged Haifa Labour Council secretary Eliezer Molk with "inciting the workers of Haifa to physical violence against the doctors."

Dr. Yishai wrote to Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, Secretary-General of the Histadrut, asking him "to restrain" Mr. Molk.

The doctors' leader said Mr. Molk had circulated a letter among Haifa Kupat Holim doctors calling upon them to "respect their oath and the ethics of their profession, and to stop all strike action."

Calling the letter "an attempt by a Histadrut official to undermine the democratically elected leadership of the doctors," Dr. Yishai noted that Mr. Molk had gone on to warn the physicians: "We are trying to hold back an angry public, but from day to day our ability to restrain them is weakening in view of the radical actions of the doctors' organization."

Work dispute declared at Ashdod Port

ASHDOD. — The local Labour Council yesterday declared a work dispute in Ashdod Port — and promptly got into a dispute with the management over what the real issue was.

A Council spokesman warned yesterday that unless the dispute were settled within a fortnight, a "partial" general strike would be called. He said the management had rejected a number of wage and fringe benefit demands submitted by the Marine Department employees.

Port management circles, on the other hand, yesterday charged the Labour Council with trying to mislead the public. They said the real dispute was over the appointment of Mr. Yehoshua Harbon as anchorage section chief. Mr. Harbon won the tender for the job, but the works committee had wanted another man.

The Marine Department employees waged a partial strike over that issue last month.

Management officials pointed out that the citrus season at Ashdod Port starts next week, and that any sanctions carried out by the workers would seriously disrupt exports.

Lod customs shed back to normal work

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Customs workers at Lod Airport yesterday agreed to call off their sanctions and return to normal work routines.

At a meeting held in the afternoon, the men — who work in the freight shed — voted to heed an appeal by the Histadrut's Trade Union Department that they resume normal operations while a special Histadrut committee negotiates a settlement of their dispute with the Government.

The workers are demanding pay bonuses for the "excessive work load" they claim is being handled at the customs shed. Their sanctions began in mid-October, and resulted in a slowdown in the release of goods, a curtailment in the period allotted for receiving the public and, occasionally, the complete shutdown of the Lod Airport Customs House.

Hospital beds short for chronically ill

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Health Minister Victor Shemtov told the Knesset this week that hospitals have nowhere near the number of beds they need for chronic cases. Even when present plans are implemented, he said, only three-quarters of the chronic disease patients will be accommodated, the Minister told Mr. Uri Avneri (Ha'olam Hazeh).

He told the same questioner that the 105 artificial kidney machines at present in the country, can cope with the demand. They could be used still more effectively, Mr. Shemtov said, if more nurses could be trained to operate them.

Meir, Eban at dinner for Barbour

TEL AVIV. — Prime Minister Golda Meir and Foreign Minister Abba Eban were present at a dinner given at the Hilton Hotel here last night for the outgoing U.S. Ambassador, Mr. Walworth Barbour.

The dinner was given by Dr. George S. Wise, President of the Israel-American Friendship Society.

WRITER LOSES APPEAL IN COURT

Censor's ban stands on 'offensive' Keinan play

The High Court of Justice yesterday rejected writer Amos Keinan's application to have the Film and Theatre Censorship Board ordered to show cause why it should not drop its ban on his play, "Friends Tell About Jesus."

The decision, which the court will elaborate on at a later date, came a day after the Board specified to Keinan that the play was insulting to Christians, to general moral values and to the feelings of parents of fallen soldiers.

The court had directed the Board on October 8 to detail its reasons, after Keinan applied for an order nisi on the grounds that the ban was an infringement of freedom of artistic expression and a socialistic attack. The Board's original explanation for the ban had been simply that the play held in contempt "values sacred to a portion of the Israeli public."

In the amplified explanation it submitted to Keinan on Wednesday, the Board said that, in addition to Christians, the play was offensive to all religious people — and even to most secular persons — whom it said "respect the religious feelings of their neighbours." The Board added that the play included insults to God and to Jesus and Mary, along with coarse passages offensive to bereaved parents and to "overall moral values."

In court yesterday Mr. Keinan's attorney, David Manny, said he had not had time to prepare his reply to the Board and maintained that, given time, he could prove that the Board's true motives were unconnected with Christianity.

Mr. Manny claimed that, in an unbroadcast television interview, Board head Levi Guery had said nothing about Christianity when questioned on the play.

At this point Justice Moshe Landau suggested that if Mr. Keinan rewrote his play it would receive permission to be staged. Attorney Manny answered that Mr. Keinan was willing to retitile it "Friends Tell About Spartacus," but then Justice Landau wanted to know: "What about the Holy Mother mentioned in the play?"

The Justice was not satisfied with Attorney Manny's contention that the mother figure was only thought of as Jesus' mother. He added: "In any case, I know nothing about Spartacus' mother or what she was."

The bench — Justices Landau, Moshe Etzioni and Eliahu Mann — said they would explain the grounds for their rejection of Mr. Keinan's application at a later sitting. (Tlm)

Hevra Kadisha found guilty of destroying stone

The Supreme Court yesterday rejected an appeal of two directors of the Kurdish Hevra Kadisha in Jerusalem, who had been found guilty in a lower court of destroying a tombstone.

Four years ago the two men, Rabbi Shmuel Baranek and Meir Gershon, ordered cemetery workers to destroy a tombstone erected by Mr. Simha Sasson over his mother's grave because Sasson had not paid the IL1,000 fee. The two were charged — and acquitted — in Magistrates Court on charges that they "offended human dignity" and caused damage to property. But the State appealed to the District Court, which found them guilty on both charges.

The burial society officials, however, appealed to the Supreme Court, which was presided over by Chief Justice Shimon Agranat, with Justices Alfred Witkon and Moshe Etzioni in attendance. This court found the two guilty of the first charge, while acquitting them of the property charge, and referred the case back to the District Court.

Leather firm closes down

In a statement to the press, the firm's management said the price of leather on the international markets had risen so high that it was unable to continue manufacturing at a profit. If prices return to "reasonable levels" in the future, the statement added, the company could consider resuming operations.

existence of Israel) and the Arab possible only under the aegis of the Israel Government and their departure from the West Bank and Gaza will mean the pre-conditions for the return of Israel's access to the West Bank and Gaza. "If this also Mr. Peres declared: "If it's such a catastrophe, why are we still in the territories? Will the Fatah be nicer in five years' time and Hussein more amenable? I do not understand why Sapir does not take his words to their logical conclusion and propose to the Party Central Committee that we immediately withdraw from the territories and that Zohar pulls back."

"If, as Sapir says, things are going to be so black, then let's cut our losses. But if we are going to remain, then what are we going to do until the day of withdrawal?" Mr. Peres asked.

He said he believed that Mr. Dayan's policies in the territories are one of Israel's great successes, and the greatest in Israel's relations with the Arabs. "Neither we nor the Arabs have the same view of each other as before 1967."

He strongly disagreed with Mr. Sapir's conclusions based on statistics: "Sapir's criticism of the future makes him draw conclusions about the present. Faith in Jewish fate and future was always greater than statistical evidence, which always worked against Zionism. And are we to prefer statistics to faith?"

Mr. Peres wondered why Israel should now give in at a time when the prospects of aliya were so bright.

He did not believe that peace could be reached with Jordan through an overall settlement, and he feared that the present peace-like situation with Jordan would be ruined at the conference table "because Hussein is unready to accept even the Alon plan and no Jew will give up Jerusalem. Instead, he preferred the dynamism of the status quo. Dismissing the idea of a Palestinian state, Mr. Peres repeated his idea of a federal solution with the West Bank, meanwhile denouncing "those who believe we can preserve the purity of the ideal of Jewish labour at the price of Arab unemployment."

REFUGEE PROBLEM

The Transport Minister questioned Mr. Sapir's contention that money could not be mobilized for tackling the refugee problem, saying that "if a political party has to decide first on the value of something and not on its price, I am proud of the social revolution wrought by Israel's presence in the West Bank" — and all this "without the scaffolding and with the freest press in the Arab world." As to Mr. Kargman's concern at the risk of IL100m. in the territories, he asked: "Is that the first IL100m. we have risked?"

Would it be saving money, Mr. Peres asked, if the West Bank was up in flames in rebellion?

Labour Party Secretary-General Aharon Yadin cautioned that, at the next meeting the summing up of the debate would deal only with economic policies in the territories, and despite the discussion of Israel's future borders, there was no need to amend the party's "oral doctrine."

Lansky 'satisfactory' France to send 30 tanks, other arms to Libya

MIAMI (UPI). — Meyer Lansky, the reputed financial adviser of the American underworld, was reported in satisfactory condition yesterday in the Mount Sinai medical centre where he is undergoing treatment for "cardiac insufficiency."

A Miami heart specialist said cardiac insufficiency is a "general term for heart failure. At 70 years old, his heart may be playing out."

Lansky was admitted to hospital late Wednesday night.

Lansky is free on $250,000 bond, and a signed recognizance note of $400,000 on three charges — contempt of a federal grand jury, skimming proceeds from gambling operations at the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas and having his income tax returns falsified.

Meanwhile, Doug McMillan, chief of the local justice department organized crime force, said he felt the high bonds on Lansky "will discourage any disappearances."

But, he added, federal agents were keeping him under very close surveillance.

McMillan said he believed Lansky would be brought to trial within 45 days on the contempt charges, and then would be sent to New York to face charges of having his tax returns falsified.

The contempt charges stem from Lansky's refusal to return from Israel last year to answer questions about illegal gambling operations.

Lansky, under threat of deportation, left Israel last Sunday seeking a country that would accept him and permit him to remain beyond the reach of U.S. authorities. He travelled 20,420 km. from Europe to South America, but found no country that would take him.

He was set free under bond on Tuesday after a hearing before a U.S. commissioner.

CANCELS SUIT

TEL AVIV. — It was reported yesterday that Lansky had had his lawyer cancel his $1.1m. damages suit against "Teddy Aharonov" for a series of articles the paper printed about him last year.

Lansky's attorney, Mr. Yoram Aron, said his client had realized that the series was simply a reprint of material that had appeared abroad and that "Teddy" had printed the articles in good faith, without intending to harm his reputation.

At a certain stage in the suit, which was begun in July 1971, "Teddy's" attorney had sought to speed up the case in order to hear Lansky sooner on the grounds that he might not be in the country long enough to testify. Lansky's attorney refused this, but the two sides agreed that the suit would be dropped if Lansky was unable to testify.

With the acceptance yesterday of Lansky's motion by the Tel Aviv District Court Registrar, Judge David Wallach, the case is now closed.

Anniversary of de Gaulle's death marked

PARIS (Reuters). — France commemorated the second anniversary of the death of Charles de Gaulle yesterday and the Gaullist faithful, from Prime Minister Pierre Messmer downwards, insisted his spirit still had a major role to play in French life.

Some imagined that Gaullism would die with de Gaulle, Defense Minister Michel Debre recalled. "But Gaullism is not dead. It is very much alive. The great work continues."

While the ringing exhortations of the staunchly Gaullist Mr. Debre may have invigorated the faithful, the anniversary was commemorated with a measure of restraint that indicated General de Gaulle had passed into history for most Frenchmen.

President Pompidou did not want to make the occasion a political event. He kept out of the limelight and asked Mr. Messmer, a close collaborator of the late French leader, to represent him at the main memorial service at Les Invalides.

The service, close to the Tomb of Napoleon, was timed to take place at the very hour at which General de Gaulle collapsed and died in his country home at Colombey-les-Deux-Églises in eastern France.

While Mrs. Yvonne de Gaulle, the general's widow, and his son, 50-year-old Rear-Admiral Philippe de Gaulle, attended a special mass in Colombey yesterday morning, memorial services were held around the country, films on de Gaulle were shown on television and tributes were paid to his memory on the radio.

Lebanon's former Premier Charles Helou planted a clump of 10 cedar trees near De Gaulle's home as a token of Arab gratitude to the late French President. Later, 1,000 Lebanese cedars will be planted around the hill at Colombey.

Meir: Not obligated to accept imposed settlement

STRASBOURG, France (UPI). — She said the differences between Israel's Prime Minister Golda Meir said in an interview released yesterday that Israel is not obligated to accept any peace settlement for the Middle East reached between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

"They know we are not obligated to accept it if we consider it contrary to our security," the Israeli leader said in an interview published in the "Jewish Tribune."

"I think that the United States has seen that this is proper," she said.

Speaking of the prospects for peace in the Middle East, Mrs. Meir said "the situation is not necessarily the same as before, but also, as always, Egypt is not prepared to conclude the peace with us."

She said the differences between the Soviet Union and Egypt will not remain a major barrier between the two nations because of their mutual needs. "Egypt has need of the U.S.S.R. for... weapons and the U.S.S.R. needs Egypt for installations in the Near East," she said.

The Israeli Premier said she hopes for a reconciliation between France and her nation. "I hope France changes her position vis-a-vis Tel Aviv." Relations between the two countries have been strained since France broke off a deal for the sale of Mirage jet fighters to Israel in 1967.

Mrs. Meir deplored the French sale of planes to Libya which she said was "one of the centres for the training of terrorists against Israel."

British battle I.R.A. men in Belfast

BELFAST (AP). — British troops fought bitter street battles with gunmen of the Irish Republican Army yesterday as guerrilla bombers struck again.

A patrol stumbled on a massive 320-kilo mine, the biggest bomb known in three years of sectarian feuding, near the border with the Irish Republic.

Two soldiers were wounded and at least two gunmen and a girl hit in three shootouts in the Falls Road, a Roman Catholic stronghold.

The army swept through the Andersonstown district of the capital at dawn yesterday and claimed to have captured three senior officers of the I.R.A. Provisional's battalion there, including its commander. They also uncovered 34 sticks of gelignite stuffed in a garbage can.

The move adds a money squeeze to the 90-day pay-price freeze announced Monday by Prime Minister Edward Heath.

The move is designed to mop excess spending money in circulation which is increasing at the exorbitant rate of over 20 per cent per year.

An announcement from the Bank of England said that all banks and financial houses accepting deposits must turn over to the state bank one per cent of all deposits held on November 15 with one-half per cent to be handed in on November 30 and one-half on December 14.

The bank's announcement did not say how long the special deposits would be held.

89 on hijacked plane returned to Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP). — A relief Mexican airliner flew 82 passengers and seven crewmen home from Cuba yesterday after their hijacked plane sprang an oil leak in Havana.

But the Cuban Government gave no indication what it would do with the five hijackers, the $320,000 they collected and six suspected bank robbers surrendered by the Mexican Government.

Five armed men took over the jet on Wednesday 23 minutes after it took off from Monterrey for Mexico City. They had demanded safe conduct out of the country for six persons accused of a series of bank robberies in Monterrey and $80,000.

Kurds charge Iraq 'Villages bombed, officials kidnapped'

BEIRUT (Reuters). — The Kurdistan Democratic Party (K.D.P.) has accused the Iraqi authorities of shelling and bombing Kurdish villages, kidnapping some party members and sending others parcel bombs, according to the Lebanese newspaper "Al-Nashar" today.

A "secret" K.D.P. note published by the newspaper did not say when the alleged incidents took place.

The K.D.P. was quoted as saying "that the ruling Ba'ath party had adopted a negative attitude towards the formation of a National Front in Iraq."

The note accused the Ba'athists of "monopolizing key posts in the administration and the armed forces." It added that most of the provisions of the March 11, 1970, proclamation have not been carried out. The proclamation ended fighting in north Iraq and gave the Kurds a measure of self-government in predominantly Kurdish areas.

"Al-Nashar" said the K.D.P. had presented its note to the Ba'ath party leadership on October 28 in reply to one it had received from the Ba'ath on September 23.

The note charged that the Iraqi authorities had shelled and bombed peaceful Kurdish villages without justification or for minor reasons.

Other villages had been "wiped out of existence on unacceptable pretences," the note said.

Attempts had been made to keep Kurdish inhabitants out of Kurdish areas and to try to postpone a census stipulated in the March proclamation, it said.

The authorities were accused in the note of stalling in punishing the would-be assassins of Kurdish leader Mulla Mustafa Barzani and gunmen who fired on his son's car in Baghdad in 1970.

The K.D.P. charged that many of its members were kidnapped, arrested and tortured or killed by parcel bombs.

Another Lebanese newspaper, "Al-Hayat," quoted well-informed sources as saying that about 75,000 Iraqi troops were now engaged in "unusual manoeuvres" in north Iraq.

Big Four reaffirm rights in 2 Germans Russian dissenter dies in camp

BONN (Reuters). — The "Big Four" powers responsible for Germany since the end of World War II reaffirmed their rights and responsibilities for the divided country in a joint declaration yesterday.

The nine-line declaration — issued in Moscow, Paris, Washington and London — followed less than 24 hours after the conclusion of a pact between West and East Germany acknowledging them to be sovereign and independent states.

The four powers say in the declaration that they will support the applications by the two German states for U.N. membership. The two states are the Federal Republic of (West) Germany and the (East) German Democratic Republic.

The declaration goes on "to affirm in this connection that this membership shall in no way affect the rights and responsibilities of the four powers and the corresponding related quadripartite agreements, decisions and practices."

Yesterday Chancellor Willy Brandt said the treaty of reconciliation between East and West Germany meant the old war was over. He said the treaty, which was initiated on Wednesday in Bonn, was an important contribution to the efforts of the Western Allies to eliminate tension with the Soviet bloc.

MOSCOW (Reuters). — Yuri Galanskov, Soviet dissenter whose trial in 1968 brought protests here and abroad, has died in a labour camp following a stomach operation, usually reliable sources said yesterday.

They said Galanskov, who was 33 and unmarried, died November 4 at a camp in Potma, in Mordovia, east of Moscow. He was serving a seven-year sentence for anti-Soviet agitation and was due for release in January, 1974.

Galanskov was arrested early in 1967 together with a fellow employee of the State Literary Museum, Alexander Ginsburg, and two others. His sentence ran from the date of his arrest.

The trial was widely seen as a follow-up to the case of dissident authors Andrei Sinavsky and Tull Daniel, whose trial Ginsburg documented. His report, known as "The White Book", was circulated here and published abroad.

Unofficial Soviet protests against the Galanskov-Ginsburg trial collected several hundred signatures.

12 Japanese rescued after 19 days on raft

KOBE, Japan (AP). — Twelve Japanese fishermen were picked up yesterday by a Spanish ship while drifting on a life raft for 19 days in the Pacific some 300 kms. east of Guam, northeastern Mindanao in the Philippines, the Maritime Safety Agency (M.S.A.) said.

The M.S.A. said the Spanish ship, "Marques De Bola," radioed the rescue of the fishermen whose 39-ton fishing boat, "Ryosei Maru," sank on October 22 about 300 kms. northeast of the rescue site.

RANCE COMING TO GRIPS WITH ITS SEX PROBLEMS

French attitudes to sex are under close scrutiny once again with the publication of a Kinsey report on the country's mores, the trial of a teenage abortionist and the arrival of a doctor by his peers for setting sex instruction among school pupils.

France in France. A recent survey by the Education Ministry of secondary schools, which have almost three million pupils, revealed that, although one quarter of the schools provided lessons in sexual instruction, only 93,000 children attended. The result is that one third of the population feel they are not adequately informed about sex.

Simon bears the name of Simon, a 47-year-old gymnast who is one of France's apostles of birth control. But a trial was assembled by the Tribunal d'Opinion Publique, a national poll organization of reputation. The Simon report's ages contain a mine of information about the changing patterns of life, the relative status of men and women and the emergence of education in matters of sex.

experience of physical love with a boy of about her own age — whereas her grandmother's partner was an older man, usually her husband. Dr. Simon also deduces that five times as many French women are no longer virgins on their wedding day than at the end of World War II.

Woe to the doctor who tries to fill the gap. Jean Carpentier, a young physician, has been suspended by the Medical Council for distributing to high school pupils booklets entitled "Let's learn how to make love." At Corbeil, near Paris, 86 doctors have retorted by distributing the same pamphlet, and 6,000 persons, including Professor Jacques Monod, winner of the Nobel Prize for Medicine, have signed a petition demanding Carpentier's rehabilitation.

Simon and his investigators dug up some intriguing details changing trends in sexual behavior: for instance, adultery is more prevalent among women than among their men. Simon draws the conclusion that development of extra-conjugal relationships by women is an sign of their emancipation.

Only five per cent of the men and two per cent of the women interrogated by Simon's team admitted having had homosexual relations. This low figure does not surprise Simon who says: "The survival of ancestral taboos gives free asylum to lying and dissimulation." But Simon is satisfied that overall his report gives an honest picture of the sex life of his compatriots. Commenting on the high proportion (94 per cent) of women who make love with their husbands as a duty rather than a pleasure, Simon remarks: "With all respect to the travel agencies, the Frenchman's reputation as a great lover has taken quite a beating."

Rape case

The disastrous consequences of the ignorance which Drs. Simon and Carpentier and some of their colleagues are fighting is illustrated by the tragic case of a 15-year-old girl named Marie-Claire. Marie-Claire was raped by a boy of 17 and soon discovered she was pregnant. Her mother, who was bringing up three illegitimate children on her $300-a-month salary as an underground metro worker, arranged a back-room abortion by one of her colleagues. That would probably have been the end of the sad affair, if the rapist had not been arrested for a car theft.

Fewer virgins

Never, closer study confirms the impetus towards sexual activity among the young is gaining round very fast. Fifty-nine per cent of women under 30 are no longer virgins when they reach their 21. In their mothers' generation, the proportion was only 36 per cent. The world's mademoiselle has her first

Bitter blow

The publication of the Simon report has coincided with a bitter blow for its author who is also a founder of the Movement for Family Planning. The Movement, one of the major organizations involved in the battle for sexual education here, has suffered a serious financial setback and its survival is imperiled. The National Treasury for Family Allowances has withdrawn its annual subsidy of $30,000. The Movement receives no funds directly from the State and does not even enjoy official recognition. Clearly, the authorities' attitude is lagging way behind that of informed public opinion. One young Frenchwoman in 30 is now on "the pill" despite a labyrinth of legislation designed to ensure that they do not obtain it. Sexual education is still in its in-

Two Arab views of Nixon's M.E. moves

As much as Israelis are wondering how President Nixon will now address himself to the Middle East conflict, so are the Arabs. Israelis confidently believe that Mr. Nixon is unlikely to deviate from his policy based on identification with the needs of Israel.

of Mr. Nixon's pledges to help maintain world peace. The commentator emphasized that the American President's record of political achievements in the past year was merely part of his election campaign. Mr. Sadat has been telling the Egyptians that another confrontation with Israel is inevitable.

has so far failed to respond to any attempt at a political settlement. Regarding Egypt, the main issue for the U.S. remains the possibility of reopening the Suez Canal, the extent of Israel's withdrawal from the eastern bank of the waterway and the nature of the subsequent Egyptian presence there. The Americans believe that progress in this direction would eventually defuse the tension at the major front of conflict. This, they think, would contribute to settlements of outstanding issues between Egypt and Israel over Sinai, and between Israel and Jordan over the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and the refugee problem.

Although the Arabs deplore this policy, they do, however, appear to agree that Mr. Nixon remains an adroit politician who would adjust his moves in accordance with the dominant circumstances.

The various parties indeed appear to be awaiting the impact of Mr. Nixon's reorganization of the Administration on the Middle East. Cairo has already said that the disappearance of Secretary of State William Rogers from the scene, for instance, would eventually mean the folding of his Middle East initiatives and the emergence of new American moves.

Only the internal political complications in Egypt are obstructing a settlement between Israel and Egypt. Egypt appears to need peace more than ever, with the unrest attributable to the five-year-long state of no war, no peace.

The Arabs tend to describe Mr. Nixon as unpredictable. But among the different opinions over his future moves in the Middle East there seem to be two main schools of thought:

Conservative Arab circles believe that Mr. Nixon will soon launch a new initiative aimed at settling the Israel-Arab conflict in accordance with Security Council Resolution 242 of November 1967. The main figure of this group is probably Jordan's King Hussein, who plans a visit to the U.S. early next year. This school believes that, now that he is relieved of election pressures, Mr. Nixon will move to repair, if not to restore, normal U.S. ties with the Arab world, which, following the ouster of the Russians from Egypt, is keeping the gate open for political bargaining.

The situation with Jordan seems to be more complicated. Despite the internal stability King Hussein enjoys at present, he faces a basic territorial conflict with Israel on the one hand and a basic national conflict with the Palestinians over the Israel-held West Bank and the Gaza Strip on the other.

Ministers meet

A new Arab assessment of Mr. Nixon's future Middle East policy may be worked out at next Wednesday's pan-Arab conference in Kuwait of Foreign and War Ministers, and probably the Chiefs of Staff, representing 12 of the 18 Arab states — Egypt, Syria, Libya, Jordan, Lebanon, Iraq, Algeria, Sudan, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Tunisia and Morocco.

Hussein may manage to maintain co-existence with Israel, through concessions and sacrifices by both parties. But there seems to be no way out for him in his conflict with the Palestinians. On the one hand Hussein is confronted by violent political opposition in the Arab world, because of the terrorist movement's claim that they represent over half of his nation. On the other, he faces the people of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip who, despite partial sympathy to him, speak increasingly of future autonomy.

Mr. Nixon is unlikely to introduce dramatic changes in his Middle East policy, except for stepping up his contacts with the parties of the conflict. His search for a settlement through the achievement first of interim agreements between Israel and Egypt on one hand, and between Israel and Jordan on the other, is likely to continue. It is doubtful that at the present stage the Americans would try to establish contact with Syria, which though strong Chinese influence in South-East Asia is a continuing fact of international life, there is little likelihood of any open Chinese military expansion.

Although they publicly supported Hanoi's stand over the postponement of the Paris peace agreement last week, the Chinese are clearly using all their influence to produce a settlement rather than to prolong the war. This profound change appears to stem from their policy towards the two super-powers. They want not only an American withdrawal from South-East Asia but, perhaps even more important, the end of an opportunity for Russia to become the dominant influence in North Vietnam.

In the talks the Chinese insisted especially on the third of their five principles of coexistence, namely non-interference in the internal affairs of other nations. This is obviously intended in the first place for the protection of their own independence but it is also extended elsewhere notably to disapproval of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. The Chinese, Sir Alec was led finally to recognize, were prepared to support national liberation and revolutionary movements in other countries, even sometimes supply them with arms, but not to send in their own troops. Peking makes no claim to a Brezhnev doctrine.

CHINA WANTS VIETNAM PEACE

By ROBERT STEPHENS

PEKING (CNS). — A BASIC change in China's policy towards Vietnam was confirmed and clarified in last week's talks here between British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home and Chinese leaders. Far from egging Hanoi on to fight a liberation war to the end, as once seemed to be the case, the Chinese Government now wants a peace settlement and an end to the Vietnam war as soon as possible. Although they publicly supported Hanoi's stand over the postponement of the Paris peace agreement last week, the Chinese are clearly using all their influence to produce a settlement rather than to prolong the war. This profound change appears to stem from their policy towards the two super-powers. They want not only an American withdrawal

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT JUDAISM, ISRAEL, YOURSELF?

Do you know about Masada? Abraham Lincoln's letter "About Jews"? About Martin Buber? Do you know about black Jews and Mountain Jews? About the part Jews played in the discovery of America? About the part Jews continue to play in the American economy, in culture and politics?

Do you know that?

The Encyclopaedia Judaica belongs in the home of every Jewish parent who cares. There are 16 magnificent volumes filled with facts about people, places, events and ideas. Every page, every paragraph, every word has been painstakingly researched by world-renowned scholars.

A key to Jewish identity

What emerges is a priceless key to Jewish identity for every Jewish family. There is no better way of discovering for oneself what it means to be a Jew.

The activities and accomplishments of Jews in every age and in every part of the world are chronicled here. You'll also find accounts of the many catastrophes which have befallen the Jewish people, with full particulars on the unspeakable horrors inflicted during the period of Nazi tyranny, and the Holocaust.

The facts are presented objectively, without exaggeration or apology. Facts speak for themselves. It staggers the imagination to realize that a small people, fighting an unending battle against prejudice, bigotry and hatred, have contributed so much to world history, culture, science and the arts. (More than 60 Nobel Prize winners have been Jewish or of Jewish descent.)

The only surviving ancient civilization

Babylonia, Assyria—all the mighty empires of the past have disappeared. The Jews are the only ancient civilization to have survived intact—with a language, a religion and an ethic essentially unchanged for thousands of years. For those with a claim to this proud heritage, the Encyclopaedia Judaica provides an opportunity for learning and expanding one's sense of Jewishness.

Written for an English-speaking audience

This Encyclopaedia is not a dry-as-dust work of introverted scholarship. It is written in modern English, dedicating special articles to the past Jews played in the history and development in every part of the world, in hundreds of cities and countries.

You can read about subjects ranging from Bible to Sports, Jewish Law to Aeronautics, Kabbalah to Business Tycoons, Talmud to Motion Pictures.

You learn the name of the first European who set foot in the New World (Columbus' interpreter) and you will discover that he, too, was a Jew. Your children will be proud that 236 Olympic medals have been won by Jewish athletes since the inception of the modern Olympic Games.

For this generation and the next

After carefully examining the Encyclopaedia Judaica, David Ben Gurion said, "It is the duty of every Jewish parent in the English-speaking world to have a copy of the Encyclopaedia in the home, for the benefit of the next generation."

Helping your children to be better Jews

Do you sometimes pray that your children, and your children's children, will share in the traditions and beliefs of Judaism? Golda Meir, Israel's Prime Minister, calls the Encyclopaedia "a great educational instrument for the deepening of Jewish faith, deepening of Jewish faith, identity and sense of historical involvement." Thus, the Encyclopaedia Judaica could be an important step in making your hopes come true. Take that step now by sending in the coupon below. Herman Wouk, the prominent American author, points out that, "It is all at a high level of information and competence, yet not beyond the ordinary reader who wants to educate himself on a topic, or to improve his broad grasp of Judaism and Jewish identity."

A MONUMENTAL WORK OF SCHOLARSHIP

Complete and authoritative in the arts, the sciences, history, religion, the Bible, archeology, law, philosophy, mysticism, Israel, Americana, folklore, Jews in world culture and contemporary Jewry.

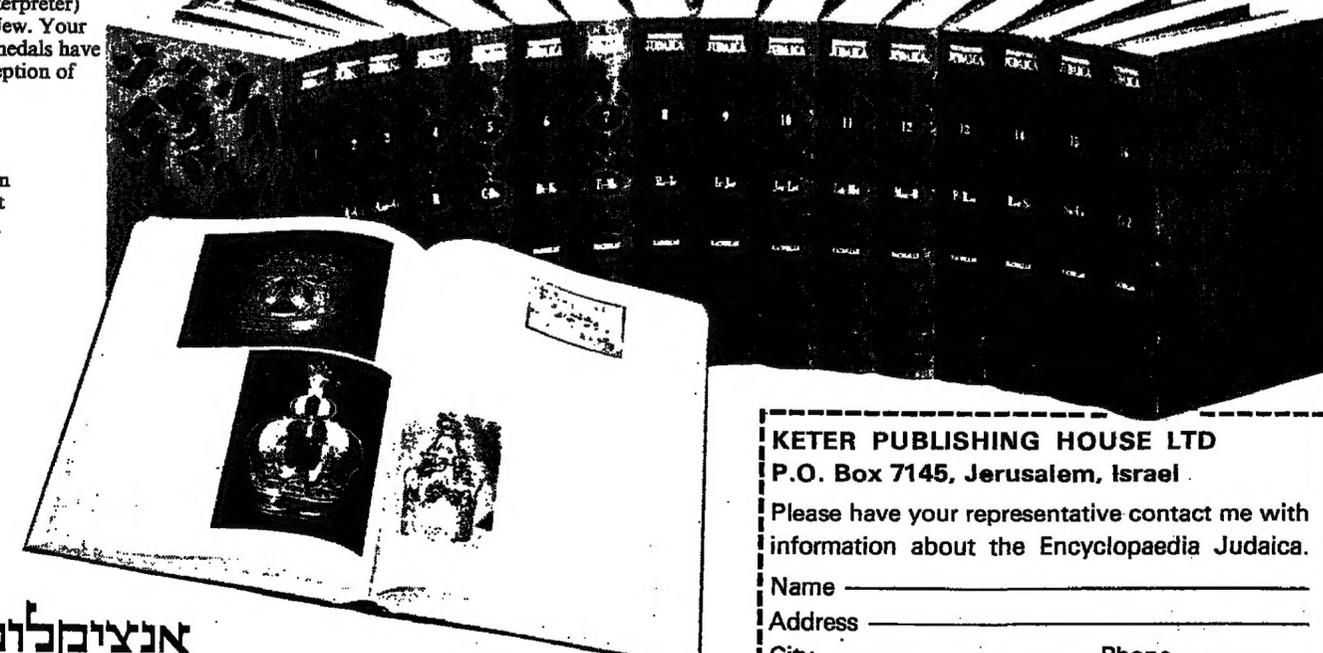

Sixteen volumes, 12,000 pages, more than 12,000,000 words, over 8000 illustrations; the work of 2500 editors, contributors and researchers in Israel and the U.S., and from every part of the world.

Special Offer for tourists

If you acquire the set of the ENCYCLOPAEDIA JUDAICA during your visit to Israel you will be able to take advantage of:

U.J.A. study mission tours Israel ROOM AT TOP FOR YOUNG U.S. JEWS

By YA'ACOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

A sociologist one day decides to research the techniques by which U.S. Jewry harnesses its man and financial resources to tasks it has set itself, he will devote a chapter to a solution which the United Jewish Appeal (U.J.A.) has found for solving the problem of the generation gap, with its aged leadership and a voracious generation of young Jews who have much to learn from the U.S. example.

In the 'fifties, Jewish leaders in the U.S. and here feared that with the gradual disappearance of the emigrants the strong identification with, and warm-hearted generosity of the American Jews towards their fortunate brothers in the rest of the world and with Israel would be lost. Early in the 'sixties the then vice-president of the U.J.A., Dr. Herbert A. Freedman (who since settled here) won the organization's approval for his project to establish a "young leadership cabinet" which promising young men would be invited to join, first under study, then to succeed the timers.

THE CHALLENGE

In 1962 Rabbi Freedman called for the challenge before them. He said that to continue efficient leadership the U.J.A. must raise only money, but men to work it, and that to that end a new generation of leadership was needed. It had to be more informed of Jewish people's history, national, cultural and religious heritage, and its present and future communal, educational and financial needs.

One of the tools used to achieve this aim was a comprehensive leadership development programme conducted in practical work for the U.S. and in seminars throughout the U.S. Since then, a Young Leadership Cabinet of 200 has been at work and several times every year young leadership study missions have come to Israel for a fortnight to learn at first hand those needs of the country which concern the U.J.A. — the main challenge being the absorption of immigrants.

One of these study missions is now in the country, touring from Sinai to the Golan, it consists of 81 men and women aged 25 to 40, including 39 couples. The group leader is the current chairman of the National Young Leadership Cabinet of the U.J.A., Donald H. Benjamin, now 40 and near "retirement age" from his post.

"I was invited to join the Jewish establishment and through a natural process become more involved," he recalls. Living in the County of Essex, New Jersey, which has a Jewish population of 100,000, he was co-opted to the Jewish Community Council there when he was still in his twenties. He continued there until 1965 when he was invited to join the Young Leadership Cabinet.

"It means a considerable sacrifice, in time and effort, and of course financially. A Cabinet member must be prepared to travel all over the U.S. at any time. We are involved in fund raising, in consultations on problems of the Jewish communities, on recruiting new people, in research.

The group is made up of professionals and businessmen, and over 80 per cent are here for their first visit (it is Mr. Benjamin's fourth). "We came here via Vienna and went to Schoenau, which is the transit station for people coming out of the Soviet Union. What was expected there made me think of the observation that he who fails to learn from the mistakes of the past is likely to repeat them.

We shall go back home knowing more, understanding better and more willing to give of ourselves, in terms of time, effort and contributions. And we have a better perspective of what we owe to us, our children and our people in terms of being Jewish," said Mr. Benjamin.

Yemenite elder Haim Damari (right) gives his blessing to Knesset Speaker Yisrael Yeshayahu. Mr. Damari, who was visiting the Knesset this week with a group of residents of Malben old-age homes, knew Mr. Yeshayahu as a child in Yemen. (Emka)

Sweden's popular king 90 tomorrow

IN earlier centuries there were many people who were devoted to their monarchies even when they disliked the king of their day. In our age, the opposite may often be true. His Majesty Gustaf VI Adolf of the House of Bernadotte, King of Sweden, of the Gotha and Vends, whose 90th birthday is being celebrated tomorrow, is universally liked, even by those in his country — and there are more than a few — who do not think that Sweden still needs a monarchy. When the present King was still Crown Prince, it used to be said: "If Sweden becomes a republic, the Crown Prince is sure to be elected its first President."

In any event, Sweden is one of the world's most thoroughly democratic countries. Traits indispensable to the image of its monarch are therefore dignity, personal modesty, and a way of life which adds to respect for him as a human being.

The present King answers all these requirements perfectly. In a country which values not only the substance but also the form of the conduct of its affairs, he is undisputedly a model in the fulfilment of his duties. His modesty stood out during the long years when he was Crown Prince, from 1907 until he succeeded his father, King Gustaf V, in 1950.

Prominent among his activities is one which wins him much sympathy in this country. Gustaf Adolf has been a keen archaeologist all his life. He travelled widely, visiting archaeological sites often under the incognito of a Swedish nobleman not of royal rank. In particular he was connected with the Swedish team at the Greek excavations in the Acropolis area. He frequently evinced his interest in archaeological work in this country. When recently the Masada exhibit was shown in the Historical Museum in Stockholm, he invited Professor Yigael Yadin to brief him on the progress of archaeological research here.

Though Israel is thoroughly republican, there is enough in our Jewish heritage and Messianic hopes to leave room for honour and respect for a truly good King. Our congratulations to King Gustaf VI Adolf will be amongst the most sincere of the many he is sure to receive on his 90th birthday.

WHERE DOES BEN-AHARON LEAD TO?

Here is a statement by the General-Secretary of the Histadrut:

"There can be no co-existence and pluralism between the hegemony, in government and economy, of the working class, and the spiritual and educational supremacy of a capitalistic future. A decision must be made towards the establishment of a free and socialistic workers' society — and it must not be postponed."

HIGH-SOUNDING WORDS—BUT WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

- * "There can be no co-existence..." — This man, who speaks for the party in power, wants to abolish free enterprise and to eliminate the middle class.
- * "A decision must be made... and must not be postponed"; The Histadrut's General-Secretary wants, "Socialism in our time" right now. Like Allende's Chile, or Tito's Yugoslavia.
- * "A free and socialistic workers' society..." but a society cannot be free and socialistic. They are opposites, like light and darkness, liberty and tyranny, progress and reaction.

We know from experience, what a socialistic society means: poverty for the many, slavery for the workers. A free society is non-socialistic and means: A rising standard of living, through development of the economy, social justice and human freedom.

Two ways of life, EITHER - OR. The choice is yours.

HEAVEN BEGINS AT LOD AIRPORT

By A.S.I. AOKER

HEAVEN is not only a place, it is also a state of mind, and when Moshe P. got there he immediately acknowledged its perfection. Life's fretful burdens had fallen from his shoulders and all vexation had been left behind him. Being dead he felt more alive than he ever had on Earth. He stood where he found himself (to recover his breath, as it were) and stared about him in transports of wonder and spiritual satisfaction.

He noticed almost at once that where he was bore a remarkable resemblance to the reception hall at Lod Airport. He was in a vast, concourse, crowded, noisy, dirty and the air seemed not quite pure. It was not just similar, he realized, it was exactly the same — but with a difference: the crowds were crowds of angels; the noise was the sound of angels, singing songs of praise; the dirt was holy dirt, golden and luminous; and what was the smell but the odour of sanctity?

Moshe was brimful of bliss. He was proud of being an angel and proud of the angels he saw all around him. Some had wings and some had haloes and some had both. Some wore frock coats with holes for the wings — an inconvenient but colourful costume — and some kept their haloes under a shawl. Most carried a harp under their arms. The new arrivals were undressed, they were simply as they had come from Earth but all, all were angels.

"So this is Heaven," said Moshe to himself. "And look at that — how marvellous! — a real angel sweeping the floor." On looking closer, he had to admit that the angel was not working very effectively. "But that's not the point," he thought. "The point is, that it is a real angelic floor sweeper." He wandered toward the exit and was stopped there by an angel who inspected him with the boredom of one who had spent ten thousand times ten thousand years at the same job. "Hosanna," said the angel, not bothering to look at him. "Anything to declare?"

ANGELIC ECONOMY

"Hosanna, hosanna," Moshe replied enthusiastically. "I can only declare that this is a most wonderful experience for me. Although, at the same time I should say..."

Without waiting for him to finish (he'd heard it all before) the angel chafed Moshe both back and belly and wayed him on. "Marvellous, marvellous!" Moshe muttered. "Such angelic economy of effort! The way he flicked just three fingers at me to drive me through, such divine rudeness can be found only in Heaven."

Dazed with glory, Moshe walked the streets of Heaven. How like Tel Aviv it was! but more so. Every street was a Dizengoff, bursting with life (or afterlife, if that's the right way to describe it) and the road filled with Charlots of Fire, driven as recklessly as cars in Petah Tikva. As a matter of fact, Moshe was run over several times and if he hadn't been dead he would surely have been killed; if he had been a lesser man, it would have made him homesick.

He wandered on, seeing the sights (it might have been for one year, it might have been ten) until he began to feel that the time had come for him to join more actively in the affairs of Heaven. He thought himself ready to apply for his halo and wings. When he found the right place to make his application — and this was not so simple, even in Heaven — he felt a twinge of nostalgia. The place reminded him so much of something, somewhere in the dim past. Perhaps it reminded him of an office in the Jewish Agency, but he wasn't sure. It might have been the information desk at Haifa University and it might even have been the vehicle licensing department of the Ministry of Transport. It was hard to distinguish them in his mind after such a long time.

At each end of a long, long corridor there was an office. Above the window of one, in mile-high letters of burning gold, was a sign, WINGS, and above the other a similar sign, HALOES. "What could be clearer," thought Moshe. "Only in Heaven could there be such organization." Since it made no difference to him which he got first he put himself at the back of the queue for wings. After a year or two — but who counts in Heaven? — he found himself at the head of a mighty throng packed round the window. As in Israel, oddly enough, the hole through which he was supposed to poke his head was of a height that obliged him to bow his legs and hump his back. From there he could see a number of angels all busy with the affairs of God. After some time — but what is time in Heaven? — one of the angels flicked a glance at Moshe. "No," he said, and turned away again.

"Hosanna," said Moshe, politely. "What do you mean, 'No'?"

"I mean, no, not today," said the angel, with a smile and a sorrowful shrug of his golden wings. "Come back in a couple of years — or even the year after that."

WRONG WINDOW

"But I would like a pair of wings."

The smile on the face of the angel was one of terrible compassion. "Wrong window," he said. "That's the one you want," and he pointed to the far end of the corridor.

Moshe looked up at the sign above his head: WINGS. But this is where it says "wings," he said.

A wave of sympathetic understanding flowed from the angel and washed over Moshe. "I know it's terrible. It says 'wings here,' but that's where you have to get them. Over there. This office is for haloes."

"Never mind, never mind then," said Moshe, speaking quickly to keep the angel's attention. "It doesn't matter, so give me a halo then."

"Alas!" said the angel, his eyes swimming in tears of pity. "Alas! You must get wings before you can get a halo."

"But what's the difference?"

"I'm sorry, but that's the rule here."

"But after all..."

"I'm sorry, but I just work here, you know."

"But..."

Even an angel can run out of patience. "Next," he thundered, trumpet-tongued, and Moshe was blown out through the Heavenly Host and to the back of the queue for the other window. He waited and waited (not as long as he would have to wait to see a doctor in Kupat Holim) but a long time. Fortunately, even standing in line is a joy in Heaven. At last he was at the front again.

The angel there was dressing the feathers of his right wing, but busy as he was he had time to glance at Moshe. "No," he said.

"What do you mean, 'No'?" said Moshe, but not so politely. He looked up at the sign: HALOES. He said, "This is the place that gives out haloes, isn't it?"

"It is."

"I would like a pair, please."

"But where is your harp?"

"What harp?"

"The harp you must show me before I can give you your wings."

"But why do I need to show you the harp?"

"To prove you're an angel, of course."

THE ANGEL CLERK

There is no need to give all the details of how Moshe found out where the harps were and what he had to do to get one. All of us still living on this little corner of Earth can make a good guess of what he had to do and how long it took him to do it. Eventually, then, he was at the window, bent like a pretzel, ready to speak to the angel who handed out harps.

"Yes," said the angel, and beamed with delight. "Sign here."

"Ah!" said Moshe, signing with one hand — and grabbing with the other — he was getting acclimatized, even to Heaven. "But, hey!" He looked at what he held in his hand. It was a golden shovel. "What's this for? I want a harp."

"A harp?" cried the angel, in great amazement. "I'm terribly sorry. You should have said. And why did you sign this?"

"I signed for a harp. Didn't I?"

"I'm very afraid you have made a mistake. You have signed a form that irrevocably commits you to participating in a 30,000 year up-hill obstacle race..."

"Oh!"

"Yes," said the angel, "and the course to be raced on one-wheeled bicycles."

"But what have you given me the shovel for?"

"Good heavens! Don't you know anything? Before you can race 30,000 years up a hill, you must have a hill to race on. You use that shovel to build the hill. We can't have everything perfectly ready for all you new angels who keep coming here all the time." He waved goodbye. "Hosanna," he said.

"Hosanna," said Moshe. "The ways of the Lord are truly mysterious."

JAPAN LOOKS FOR IMPORTS

An embarrassment of foreign currency

By J. VOET Jerusalem Post Correspondent. JN's foreign currency reserves during September by only $1.5 billion. This was regarded as a considerable improvement on the month, when the increase was no less than $488m.

days of speeches by government and trade representatives and the third day was devoted to establishing direct contacts with Japanese buyers.

Japanese authorities previously expected $20,000m. and $17,000m. the amount of any country in the world, swollen inflation-producing forces are a subject of concern in Japan. Too little a currency is bad for any country, but too much of what is, self, an excellent thing, can also be a disaster. Some experts even think the country's true reserves are above the $20,000m. mark, although the official statistics mention figures.

More seminars for European importers are being planned for the near future. It would not be a bad idea for Israel exporters to approach our own authorities as well as their Japanese contacts, with a view to getting Israel classified under Europe for this special purpose. If Israel businessmen could participate in one or more of the future seminars for Western businessmen, our exports to the Far East might increase appreciably.

S. African travel agents here

Group of 10 South African travel agents are now touring Israel as guests of the Tourism Ministry and the S. African Airlines.

Their arrival coincides with a steadily rising curve of tourism from South Africa, which reached 15,000 in the first nine months of the year. Estimates indicate another 3,000 South Africans will arrive before the year is out, marking a 20 per cent increase over the 1971 figure.

Dear Passenger, In view of mounting costs and increased expenses involved in operating the transport services,

The Government has authorized an increase in fares, effective from Sunday, November 12, 1972.

The calculation of the cost increases and the checking of these increases have been carried out scientifically and in accordance with indices and fixed procedures,

established by a public committee, which was sanctioned by the Government and sat under the chairmanship of M. Kashty.

We hope that the increase in fares will enable us to continue the operation of transport facilities at a level in keeping with a public service.

EL AL LAUNCHES 25th YEAR PLAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter. El Al is this week initiating what it describes as an "unprecedented" publicity campaign throughout the U.S. in order to attract the largest possible number of Americans to Israel for the 25th independence anniversary next year.

The campaign will include lecture evenings on Israel featuring also Jewish choirs and other artists, documentary films of the Israeli landscape and recorded entertainment programmes.

El Al offices in the U.S. are preparing to handle a 17 per cent increase in American tourists next year, a company spokesman announced yesterday. He added that a survey showed that only three of every 100 American Jews have ever visited Israel.

Children on the flights will receive coloured stickers showing Israeli settlements. Their elders will have

Separate services for tourists at Lod Airport

Jerusalem Post Reporter. Tourist and general information services will be separated at Lod Airport beginning next week in a move to improve their efficiency. The decision was announced to representatives of the airline companies by the director of the airport, Shmuel Klislev, at a meeting in his office.

Tourist services will be set up in the incoming passengers hall. Information to the general public will be available next to the Airport Operations Branch, in the main public auditorium, and in the hall for departing passengers.

Hitherto all information services in the airport were provided by ground hostesses of the Tourist Office. With the introduction of the separate counters they will deal exclusively with arriving and departing tourists. The general public will be served by a different staff of hostesses, 16 of whom are this week completing a special course organized by the airport management.

Sardine season was best yet

Jerusalem Post Reporter. HAIFA — Last weekend's first winter storm brought the sardine fishing season to an end, and when the Fishermen's Union counted up the catch yesterday, it turned out to have been the best season yet. Union Secretary Dov Schmiegel said that during the six months season, the 300 fishermen had caught and sold a total of just over 1,500 tons, 10 per cent more than last year. In addition, they took home a small quantity for their own use.

Of the catch 95 per cent were sold to the canning industry, yielding the men just over IL2 million, at an average of IL1.40 per kg. In addition, Gaza fishermen also caught some 1,500 tons of which industry bought 800 tons.

Mr. Schmiegel said that half the Israeli fishermen are Arabs, all of them, Union members.

Agreement at Haifa Port on handling of sling cement

Jerusalem Post Reporter. HAIFA. — The joint productivity council at Haifa Port yesterday reached agreement on a temporary norm for the unloading of bagged cement arriving ready-packed in slings. This method will make the work easier and faster and will also prevent much of the damage caused by torn bags — a frequent occurrence when they have to be handled individually.

It was agreed that the number of men per gang will be reduced from 15 to six for the sling cement, and each gang will have to unload 115 tons per shift instead of 85 tons.

A ship bringing slinged cement is due next week, and the norm is to be finalized after the first shipment is offloaded.

A ship arrived in Ashdod. The dockers there refused to unload her, because their demand for premiums of several hundred per cent was not met by the port management. The ship was then diverted to Haifa, but the local dockers also refused to handle her in solidarity with their Ashdod colleagues. She was finally diverted to Gaza. Now, the Ports Authority will press importers to bring all bagged cement by the sling method, for unloading in Haifa. Bulk cement shipments will be handled in Ashdod and single bags in Gaza.

Platform view of orange groves

Jerusalem Post Reporter. The Tourism Ministry has approved a plan to construct a 11.2km. observation tower in Nes Ziona that will give visitors panoramic view of the many orange groves in the area. A permanent exhibition of citrus also is planned.

The Ministry's Investment Committee which okayed the proposal also recommended a loan of IL500,000 to the Wild Life Authority's development firm, Bin Tsukim Ltd., to develop a stalagmite cavern near Beit Shemesh, south of Nazial Sorek, as a tourist site.

Another proposal by the committee was to lend IL250,000 to Arkia, the inland airline, for the purchase of two new Viscount airliners. Sapir says businessmen fail absorption fund

By YA'ACOV ARDON Jerusalem Post Reporter. HAIFA. — Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir berated representatives of 14 economic organizations at a meeting at City Hall on Wednesday night for having so far failed to make a significant contribution to the IL100m. fund for the absorption of immigrants. The fund was set up ten months ago and Mr. Mark Mosevics, head of the Manufacturers Association, is chairman.

"The performance of the campaign has been disappointing. I thought we would collect more in a shorter time... Haifa's share does not measure up to the economic strength of the city and the size of its population," said Mr. Sapir.

The absorption of an immigrant family cost IL160,000, and the 20,000 families arriving this year, possibly more next, meant a burden of IL3,200m. for housing and services, such as schools, kindergartens and so on. "The Government cannot raise such an amount. Historians will evaluate the share of world Jewry in helping us take in the immigrants. But they will ask me what we are doing here for it. So far we have collected only half of the IL100m. What shall I tell them? I stand ashamed and expect that you do your duty... Let us not miss this historic challenge," said the Minister.

ASHDOD GEARING FOR BULK CEMENT

Jerusalem Post Reporter. A pumping installation to unload bulk cement, and a silo to store it, will be built at Ashdod port, the Transport Ministry announced yesterday.

Cement imports to meet the growing local demand are expected to reach 100,000 annually in the near future.

TEL AVIV STOCKS

Market 'stale' with only IL1.8m. traded. TEL AVIV. — The stock market saw another dull day yesterday with a low volume of IL1.8m. worth of shares (IL1.1m. in the variables).

The market is best described as stale: investors do not know what the next move will be, so they abstain from acting. Also, a considerable increase in the Cost-of-Living Index is expected.

The General Index of Share Prices fell by 0.50 per cent to stand at 281.46.

Volume leader was Cial Investment with 51,000 shares and a rise of 1/4 point to 208.5. Next was I.L.D.C. with 42,100 shares and a drop of 1/4 point to 210.5. Third was Wolfson with 39,000 shares traded at 115 1/2 point up.

Notable changes: Discount A, 6 points lower, at 522 (5,000); General Mortgage, down 3/4 to 230 (12,000); Solel Boneh, minus 8, at 155 (13,000) — this share was quoted "sellers only" at this price at the opening, because of lack of buyers for a big block; American Paper Mills down 19 to 465 (24,000) — although it was better in New York.

Dollar bonds were steady and C-o-L bonds continued their orderly upward trend.

Bonn and Vienna evade responsibility towards Austrian Jews AN UNPAID DEBT

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1972 VOL. XLII, No. 13635

NEWLY VOLATILE BORDER

THE sequence of events which led to yesterday's downing of two Syrian Mig's vividly reflects the newly volatile situation along the border with Syria.

There are today an estimated 6,000 terrorists in southern Syria. Some of these came from Lebanon after the Beirut authorities, in the wake of Israeli strikes, sought to clamp down on terrorist activity in southern Lebanon.

These terrorists have in recent weeks stepped up their attempts to infiltrate into Israel territory and they are supported by Syrian troops.

Cooperation between Syria and the terrorists is not a new development. But the scope of the terrorist presence today and the dangers it poses undoubtedly constitute a new level of political pressure on Damascus.

Moreover Syria is being incited from other quarters as well. Libya, its volatile partner in the tripartite Federation that also embraces Egypt, is the most fervent exponent of stepping up the terrorist war against Israel. It trains them within its borders and finances their activities.

to take sanctions against those who resist.

Syria, even if it were differently oriented, would feel the sting of this pressure, politically and financially.

In addition the leaders in Damascus find their other partner, Anwar Sadat, constantly repeating that another war with Israel is inevitable.

The Syrians could, of course, ask why when Sadat does not himself admit terrorists or abrogate the cease-fire, they should in effect act as his front man and lose planes in the process.

But they too understand that while Sadat talks a war he cannot wage, he hopes that somehow someone, notably Washington and Moscow together, will extricate him from his dilemma and work out a palatable Israeli withdrawal from the Suez Canal.

The Syrians have no such escape hatch. Consistently rejecting any idea of a political settlement they have deprived themselves of options. They must nod in assent when Sadat talks war or when Gaddafi preaches murder.

The result is a terrorist presence which cannot easily be denied facilities for action. As in the case with Lebanon, it is Israel which must do the persuading that this way out will be too costly.

NOVEMBER 10, 1938, is the date of "Crystal Night" when throughout Germany and Austria Nazi storm troopers and civilians, with the encouragement of the authorities and party organs, wrecked and burned synagogues, Jewish homes and other properties, and humiliated, beat, injured, or killed thousands of Jews and drove others to suicide.

Though condemned by the civilized world as a symptom of typical German brutality, the anti-Jewish policy of the Nazi regime was regarded from its rise to power as an internal affair that justified no outside intervention.

With few exceptions, politicians in the neighbouring countries, East and West, failed to interpret the Nazis' cynical disregard for Jewish lives, rights and property for what it was — a stage in the progressive contempt for the rights of anyone standing in the way of Germany's quest for world domination.

Ominous as the Crystal Night pogrom looked to foreign observers, it was still "an internal affair" of Germany. Not until its armies invaded Poland (and later Soviet Russia) did it become clear to the rest of Europe that the anti-Jewish measures had been, so to speak, a test-tube experiment in aggression whose stunning success encouraged the Nazi leaders to try it in succession on their neighbours.

Worst hit by the events were the Jews of Austria. The German Jews had already been subjected for years to the gradual erosion of their rights; many had left with what property they could salvage and had had time to prepare their exodus. For the Jews of Austria the onslaught came with sudden, paralyzing ferocity. According to a report by an S.S. commander in Vienna, "today's operation was almost awaited by the population and accepted without opposition."

Some 500 Jews committed suicide. In Innsbruck three men were murdered in their homes or offices. A fourth was so badly beaten that the hospital doctors doubted he would survive his head fractures. An elderly couple named Popper were thrown into the river, but managed to save themselves. The husband was then jailed.

Auschwitz

In a recent reader's letter in the Tel Aviv German-language newspaper "Jedioth Chada-shoth," an Austrian Jew wrote, "my parents and brothers were sent to Auschwitz by Austrians, personal acquaintances. I was arrested by an S.S. man named Fetschl, a competitor of our leather goods shop which he then "seized" (expropriated); he too had been an acquaintance. Today the murderers and plunderers assert they had been overpowered by the Germans and continue to enjoy the looted property.

The Germans at least are paying compensation... are the Austrians who received Hitler in 1938 with enthusiasm and who treated the Jews of Austria with much greater brutality than their German teachers?..."

Excluded

The letter refers to the little-publicized fact that the West German Government has deliberately excluded Austrian Jews from its restitution law on the "territorial principle" (under which each sovereign state is responsible for compensating its residents who suffered injustice, in this case racial persecution). The Vienna Government, on the other hand, asserts that Austria itself was the victim of German aggression and cannot therefore be expected to compensate Jewish victims of the Nazis. It has paid them small welfare grants, a fraction of what the German laws accord to Jewish survivors. It has passed no legislation for the return of expropriated Jewish property, or for compensation.

Some 50,000 Austrian Jews survived throughout the world, about 16,000 of them in Israel.

The Jewish leaders, headed by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, who negotiated with the Austrian Government, failed to press the case of the Austrian Jews possibly due to the haste and urgency with which they tried to secure a restitution agreement in the early '40s, when Israel was critically short of foreign exchange. In this regard it should be noted that the East German Government, unlike Bonn, has completely disclaimed responsibility for the crimes of the Third Reich, asserting that its denazification campaign after the war cleared the country of all Nazis.

The manner in which Bonn and Vienna have since disclaimed moral and financial responsibility for compensating Austrian Jews (many of them destitute, aged and ailing) and the fact that no public figure and no politician in either country has spoken up against this has been denounced by Dr. S. Schoenblum, of the World Association of Austrian Jews on Compensation. "They expect to settle the matter by dragging it on until we die. Our death will rid them of an uncomfortably just claim. Nobody denies that we do have a claim. The Germans have recognized the claims of the Jews from other occupied territories. And Austria was more than occupied. It was an integral part of the Reich," comments Dr. Schoenblum.

PRINTING MONEY

THE WAR ON INFLATION To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — I observed with satisfaction that Gahal put in an advertisement accusing the Government of financing its budget deficit by printing money (November 2). I think, however, that the expensive ad completely missed its point for the general reader. The "increase of the means of payment" means little to the man in the street unless he is told that it results in creating additional, artificial purchasing power and consequently rising prices, i.e., inflation. Strangely, the word inflation is not mentioned at all in the ad.

Is this just another angle to the unending war of words against inflation, without action by Government or opposition? The public must be told that inflation, unlike the equally talked-about weather, is not a gift of God but man-made. The old-age pensioner, the fixed-salary employee, the little man who sees his small savings evaporate, ought to know that deficit spending by public bodies is the main cause of the inflation which everybody is against but nobody seems to do anything about.

POSTAL DELIVERY MYSTERY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — I have a daughter studying at the Hebrew University and renting a flat in Jerusalem. Her address is 23 Rehov Neve Shanan. For the past two weeks, all mail that I have sent to her at that address has been returned to me with a stamp from the post office informing me that she "has moved or has died or is no longer living there." Inasmuch as she visited me just this week (when two postcards were returned), I know that she is alive and well. She has assured me that she is indeed living at that address and she has a mail box on her door with her name in both Hebrew and Latin characters. The house is clearly marked No.23.

There are three or four apartments at that same address and I do not know if they are occupied or not. I only know that my daughter is living there. She has informed me that sometimes the postman drops other mail in her box which belongs to families that live on that address, but not necessarily at that address. Since she has no phone, I have no way of communicating with her except by mail. And since the post office does not deliver her mail, I cannot communicate with her at all. This aside from the fact that it usually takes from three days to a week for her to receive mail when she does get it, while it should only take one or two days. I would like to know what is the purpose of having a post office if they do not deliver mail.

PINE TREES CUT DOWN

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — I doubt whether the Municipality has the right, without a prior warning and only when this is ignored, to cause damage to private property. This happened to me on October 12. Returning home at noon, I found my beautiful pine trees cut down, which had screened me from passing trains and hindered my noise. If the pruning of single branches touching the wires was necessary in view of the approaching rains, the thing to do was to inform me and I would have gladly followed the advice at my own cost. Instead an electric saw was used in my absence, without my permission, depriving the pine trees of half their height and the eucalyptus trees of their thick mature branches.

It is very strange and sad that the Municipality which expects us to tend the gardens regardless of cost doesn't hesitate to commit such an offence. Once the damage was done, it was the duty of those responsible at least to clean up the garden and street from branches which had fallen, breaking shrubs, plants and flowers. I asked them to leave the place in the state they found it, but to no avail. They whisked away in a hurry, leaving not only the street along the house untidy, but carrying away the thickest branches for which I might have had some use myself.

Hadassah's guards

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — The behaviour of the guards who control the entry of traffic to the grounds of Hadassah Hospital is execrable, inexcusable, and exerts functions to which only trained medical personnel are privy.

My wife has been receiving treatment at Hadassah during the past month for a badly infected leg. She is a patient of Hadassah who must see her doctor there. His instructions to her have been to walk as little as possible.

On five different occasions, upon attempting to drive into the hospital grounds, she has met with vituperative shouting on the part of one or another of the security guards. On one occasion, when she was being driven by a friend, their car was not permitted past the second barrier, although the driver only wished to drop my wife at the entrance to the clinics, and then leave. According to the security guard my wife's condition did not warrant her being driven to the hospital entrance, even though the driver offered to leave his identity card with the guard as surety for his speedy exit.

My wife then obtained a permit from the Chief Security Officer of Hadassah which permitted her to drive past the second barrier and to park further into the grounds of Hadassah. Today she inadvertently parked in the wrong place, in front of the Nursing School. This infraction incurred her an attack of shouting from a guard who was standing a good distance away, near the entrance to the Hadassah clinics.

Two points should be stressed and taken to heart by Hadassah. First, the guards should have instructions to permit passage past the second barrier all vehicles carrying persons who state that they are patients or who state their need for medical aid. To permit security guards to decide that a person who can drive, or who is seated in a car, can also walk a good distance is intolerable. Guards should not have instructions which require them to make medical decisions.

Nixon: Flexible and tough

Al Hamishmar (Mapam) comments on the U.S. elections: "President Nixon has succeeded in acquiring the image of a leader who is, at one and the same time, both flexible and tough. At one time thought to be the champion of the fight against Communism, this same Nixon has blazed a path to understanding with Peking and Moscow. As far as the Middle East is concerned, one may anticipate a political struggle which will not be easy — since the President has received a mandate for four years without standing for re-election at the end of the period, and is thus free to disregard the spectre of the vote."

Hanodia (Agudat Yisrael) advances a different view: "Israel is not in line for fresh pressures, and there is no reason to fear that Nixon will alter his positive policy towards Israel."

Davar (Histadrut) writes: "As far as foreign policy is concerned, Israel can be thankful for Nixon's victory, since his first term of office augurs continuation of the sensitivity and sympathy for Israel's security — and this applies to other friends of the U.S. as well."

Hatsotz (National Religious) declares: "The Jewish vote has helped Nixon win in staunch Democratic strongholds, apparently mainly because of his support for a strong Israel."

Some of the threatened trees and houses in Jerusalem's German Colony. (Emika)

'Developers' eye Jerusalem quarter

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — The German Colony — one of the last quiet green quarters of Jerusalem — is apparently to be abandoned to the developers. No one is talking about it at the moment, or letting out exactly what is in mind, but from several reliable sources we know that government-owned land is to be put up for tender. You don't have to look further than Tzipori or Beit Hakerem to realize who is going to buy — only a contractor can afford the luxury of destroying old houses, many of them built about a century ago.

Some of us gave up fresh-bird property and deliberately came here as key-money tenants, because we fell in love with the special character of the neighbourhood — the trees, the quiet streets, the old houses, the village atmosphere with its mixed community. Now all or much of this is to be sacrificed in the name of development.

We are not against development, but we are convinced that there is plenty of land available within the existing city limits. Certainly releasing German Colony plots for sale will not bring down prices. The prices here are already beyond the reach of all except the rich.

We want to see the Colony grow from within: pull down what is tattered and dilapidated, build on the empty lots, but keep the rest because it is unique to Jerusalem and to Israel. If not, one of these days we shall wake up to find Tel Aviv everywhere.

As rate-payers we feel entitled to Council protection of our interests. We are convinced that these interests are, in the long run, those of all who care for the beauty of this city and the quality of life here.

We know that the Jerusalem Master Plan calls for preservation of the German Colony. We demand a statement of intent from the Israel Lands Authority.

As tenants who would not move out at any price, we appeal for help to all who want to preserve Jerusalem's special character and who do not want to see the city's history buried in the present.

Hadassah Medical Organization replies:

The guard is not in a position to make decisions as to who is to enter the hospital. These decisions are made only by the Chief Security Officer who is responsible for issuing permits. Unfortunately, owing to the security situation, not everyone can be allowed in, and stringent control is necessary.

At the Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Centre there are serious parking problems and the hospital administration is doing its utmost to enlarge the parking facilities. The evidence that work is being done in this direction can readily be seen upon approach to the hospital, and we expect at least partial alleviation of the problem in the near future. We are trying today to enable whoever comes to the hospital to park as near as possible to the main building. Commencing October 2, new instructions came out regarding parking regulations: the guards are to allow patients to be brought up to the main entrance and then the car parked in designated areas.

Regarding the attitude of the guards, this will be checked and appropriate action taken. We are sorry for the inconvenience caused. YITZHAK FEINBERG Press and Publications Officer Jerusalem, October 27.
